

Ellen Harding Baker: A Star Gazer

Ellen Harding Baker was born a long time ago in 1847. She loved looking up at the sky. Ellen was very interested in the stars and planets. She wanted everyone to learn about space.

Ellen was not just a teacher; she was a space explorer on Earth. She made a big quilt that showed the Solar System. This quilt took her seven years to make! She used it to teach people about the planets and the stars.

Even though Ellen lived at a time when women scientists were not very common, she worked hard. She taught many people to love the stars like she did. Ellen showed that with passion and hard work, you can teach others amazing things.

Ellen Harding Baker is remembered for her beautiful quilt and her love for the stars. She helps us understand that the sky is not just to look at; it is to learn about.
