Frames and Scenography

- A frame is each of the images that make up a movie.
- Scenography is the decoration of a movie. It is also related to elements such as light and sound.

First audiovisual productions

Years ago, machines and other inventions were used to reproduce moving images. These included the magic lantern, the thaumatrope or rotoscope, the phenakistoscope, the zoetrope, the praxinoscope, the kinetoscope, or the Lumière cinematograph. The first movies were short films because they were short in duration.

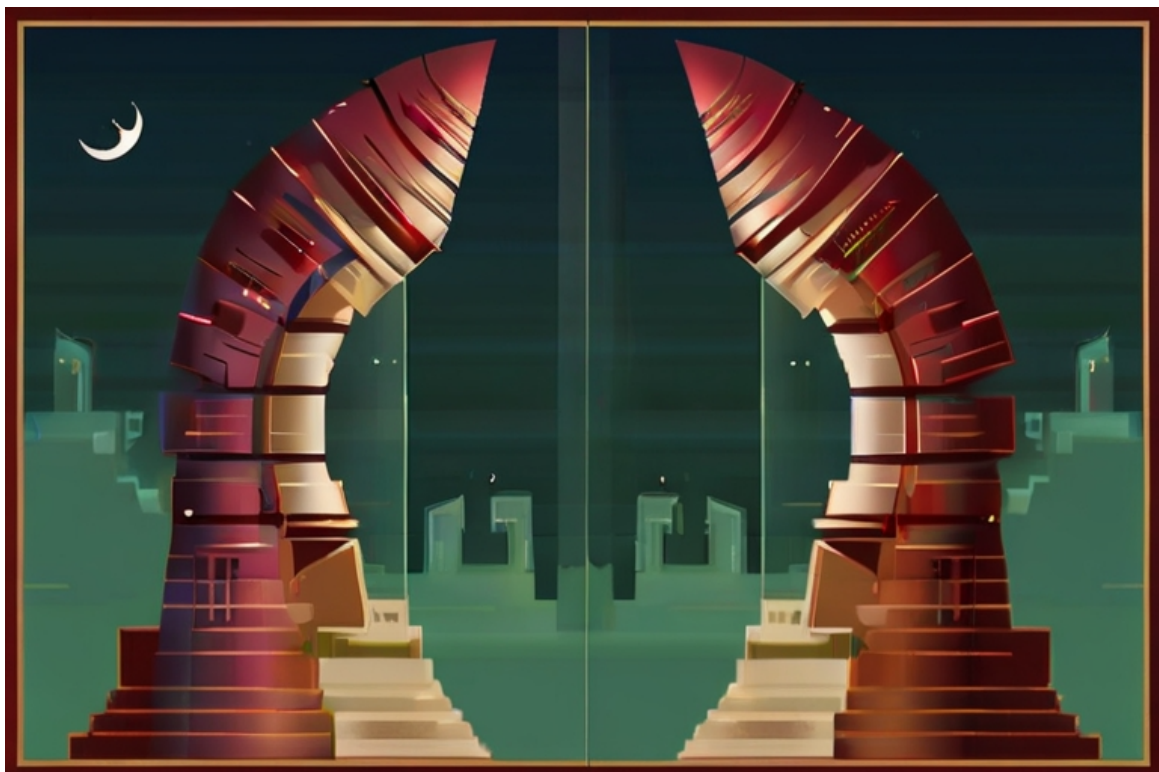

Surrealism

Artists who were part of this artistic movement were inspired by dreams and fantasies.

Basic animation techniques.

- Silhouettes (or cutouts) are an animation technique that uses moving figures.

- The flipbook is an animation technique that uses images.

Professionals in the film industry

Cinema brings together the work of directors, screenwriters, scenographers, film editors, and poster designers.
